

Cheery, Happy, Future Predictions

Well, we just made it through the end of the old world. Mayan Baktun 13 is over. Now, the 14th Mayan Baktun has begun. However, just as the old world has now past, the new world has been born, and this new world has been born in the same sad shape of the previous old one. Like Solomon said, “there is nothing new under the sun.” Welcome to the astrological age of Aquarius, whatever this really means.

Now that the last doomsday has come and gone, all the doomsday seekers will soon pick another date in the future, and warn us of all the dire happenings that we can expect then. Please! Just remember this! Everyone, yes, absolutely everyone, who has ever predicted a date for the end of the world, or the coming of the Mashiah, has been totally and completely wrong! It is fair and honest to say that any and all messianic, or doomsday predictions are worthless speculations.

Throughout Torah literature a theme is repeated regularly that only God in Heaven knows when Mashiah is to come. No one else, not even the Mashiah himself, knows when that eventful day is to transpire. Therefore, I believe that we can say, with full assurance that, whatever that day be, and whenever it may come, it is not a day that will be advertised, or one which we can await with foreknowledge.

There is absolutely no promise that doomsday, or the Mashiah, is coming any time soon. Two thousand years ago, in Second Temple times, the people then were convinced that if they started a war with Rome that Mashiah would come in the end and save them. They too had read the prophecies and were convinced that theirs was the generation of the final redemption. They were wrong, dead wrong! We all know what happened then.

There is no promise that this cannot or will not happen again. All those who push for a modern-day apocalypse, by calling for controversial actions under the deceptive cover of calling it faith, are dangerous provocateurs who endanger the security of the whole world. Doomsday seekers will not force the coming of Mashiah, but they might very well spark WWII. We do not need this, or them!

So, then why focus on doom? Forget all this talk about apocalypse and the end of the world. Forget about the fantasy that Mashiah is going to magically come and “poof” all our problems away. These attitudes and these beliefs are an essential part of our collective human problem. Deep down, I believe everyone knows that there is something deeply wrong with humanity as a whole. As such, psychological projections materialize the fear of impending apocalypse. While we cannot change the world, we can change the way we interact with it.

I will tell you this, times, harder than the present, are coming. Harder times than the present are unavoidable. They are coming and there is nothing that anyone can do to stop this from happening. And why is this so? Hard times are coming because hard times always come. This is the cycle of nature, and anyone who has ever read a history book, or who has lived long enough knows this all too well.

If we wish to survive through the harder times to come, there are some fundamental issues that we need to address. The first thing that we must do is to stop all the philosophical fairy-tales about religion, politics and society, and get back to understanding nature and the natural way. Nature is God's creation. Natural law is God's law. God's law, Torah law and natural law are all one and the same. You will learn the way of God/EHOLIM by observing and learning from the Earth that he has made.

Book learning is fine, but books can teach both what is real and what is only believed to be real. Those who learn only from books never learn the ability to differentiate between what is real and what is essentially false. Those who are confused cannot tell the difference between what is real in the world and what is false because their books make sense to them and they therefore endeavor to impose the ideas of their books on to a world that does not operate according to the premises of any book.

Because they lack experience with the real world, people who only read books are blinded to reality. This makes them terrible role models, and even worse leaders.

Fixing the world starts at home. Fixing the world starts with fixing the way we think and the way we see the world, and the way we are willing to see the world. Nature must dictate simply because we are part of the nature that the Creator has made.

Stop thinking inside the bubble of your own thoughts. Life is not what you think it is, reality is not the way you want it to be. Sorry, you are not God. You are not going to change the way things are. All you can do is to learn the way things really are, and to then go with the flow. This is the natural way, and by it being natural, it is also Divine. Thus to go in the natural way is to go the way of ELOHIM.

Learning from the natural way is exactly what King Solomon advised us to do long ago. In Ecclesiastes he wrote, there is a time and a purpose for all thing under Heaven. In other words, life, like nature, flows in cycles. There is constant movement from one form to another. Nothing ever stays the same for long. Everything is in a constant state of movement, change, growth, life and death. This is the nature of all things, as God has ordained and made the very foundation of the universe in which we live.

Let's face the hard truth. There is absolutely no security or assurances that things will stay the same, that what we have in our lives are permanent and settled.

Anyone with any common sense knows that as much as we build, something, anything in life can come and destroy. Whatever gets built up can always get torn down. And whatever gets torn down can always be rebuilt, in a different, hopefully better way. We gain, we lose, we grow, we shrink, we get sick, we get healthy, we are happy, we are sad, we live and we die. No one, nowhere, at any time has ever experienced life in any other way than this.

Indeed, the only constant and unchangeable thing about our universe is that it is forever changing. Change is the only constant. Those who go with the flow of natural change are by definition following the path of ELOHIM/God who has ordained the paths of change. Those who resist change and insist on clinging to that which is passing, end up dying along with that which is passing. They embrace the dying, and the old, instead of the living and the new. As such they cling to that which God has ordained to pass. As such, they are in conflict with God, as much much as they are in conflict with nature and reality.

God cares very little for those who insist to walk in conflict and contradiction to Him. Those who stand against God are, in the end, usually swept away into the garbage bins of history. The attitude of Heaven seems to be “good riddance to old trash.”

Once we return to a natural way of life, the next step becomes easy. The next step is to allow ourselves to remember what it means to be a human being. With all the philosophical, social and political bs being shoved down everyone's throats these days, it is no wonder that people can no longer think straight!

People act crooked because their thoughts are crooked. People's thoughts are crooked because of the things they are exposed to from the media. Remember this, the so-called news media is part and parcel of the entertainment media. Everything is meant to emotionally manipulate our minds into thinking, and believing, all sorts of unnatural nonsense.

People are so twisted and confused that they do not know any better. We have seen in the past where this kind of sickness can lead. It can lead to justified genocide. Warning ! If it happened once, it can happen again. Only this next time, the target of genocide can be anyone. Anyone without a natural human conscience can become a willing participant or tacit supporter of vicious violent, (and in their own minds), justified acts of depravity and evil against others. This is already happening around the world.

We live in a world that is in the midst of a flood as pervasive as that in the days of Noah. Instead, today we are not covered by water, we are cover by bs! We all know what eventually has to happen to s, it is either flushed down the toilet or used for fertilizer. I predict that our present flood of bs cannot go on forever.

Somehow, somewhere, and most likely sooner than later, the s will pile so high that it will eventually explode. Anyone with any common sense left senses this coming. Justify the unjustifiable all you want, in the end, the cosmic toilet will be flushed, and all the s, and everything that clings on to it will be flushed away forever. How? When? I don't know. No one does, but in one way or another, it will happen. This is definite. After all, it is only natural, and God is the Lord of nature.

My predictions for the future are bleak. Sorry, my crystal ball was repossessed for lack of payments, so I cannot provide you with more detailed revelations of the future. I have no future date for doomsday, and no misguided faith to push for the unrealistic, expecting a supernatural solution to all our natural problems.

All I can and will tell you is this: The entire world system has become a modern day Egypt. We are all slaves to a modern-day Pharaoh. And unless, we take the bold steps to get the hell out of the system, as best as we can, we, along with our present Pharaoh will face the fate of the ancient Pharaoh in the days of Moses.

Remember the ancient legend that says a large number of Israel did not leave in the exodus, they didn't live long enough, they died in the plague of darkness. Our modern plague of darkness is growing over us. If you stay with the old, you'll sink with the ship. If you have the courage to step out of the norm, take a few steps and then turn to look back, you will quickly see how what we today consider the norm is in actuality a very twisted and perverted abnormality. We cannot see it from within the system. We need to get out from it, and as far away from it as possible.

Change is inevitable. Change is fundamental. Change in natural. Change is Divine. So, go with God, or go against Him. Life is really this simple. God's promise to ancient Israel was to give them a land to call their own. God's instructions to us today is to return "to the land." This means that we return to the natural, rural life style that God has ordained for natural man to live. Cities come and cities go, but the man of the earth shall endure forever.

Continue to believe in your fantasies if you desire. But, maybe if you seek our God directly, and shed all the mental chaos that separates you from nature, you will find the Creator, and most likely in the most unexpected of places.

Happy 14th Baktun. I pray that this one will be a whole lot better than the last. The past age of Pisces stinks like old fish. I pray that Aquarius might live up to its name and cleanse us all with living, natural waters.
