The Need for a Renewal of Independence

The modern concept of a state for Jews started as a secular philosophy grounded in ideas of European nationalism and socialism. The founding fathers of Zionism and the State of Israel were all European secularists who sought the establishment of their own state as a fulfillment of their nationalistic and socialistic ideals. These individuals had no relationship to, nor any love for, religion or the religious ideals upon which Judaism is based. Their relationship to Judaism was one of coincidence and happenstance. Their relationship with the religion of Judaism was and is an uncomparable one, being that the foundational ideals of secular Zionism and Torah Judaism are essentially diametrically opposed to one another. The only thing the two share is the geographical location of the Holy Land.

Nevertheless, the Zionist State was established calling itself Jewish, but being Jewish in name only. It was originally established by Europeans, for Europeans, following a European model of government and culture. Yet, as history records, this influence was soon to be challenged by the massive immigration of Jews from Arab lands, forced to emigrate to the new State because of the ongoing hostilities between the new State and their Arab neighbors. The new immigrants from Arab lands (Sephardim) were soon forced into the European molds, changing age-old cultures, traditions and morals, reforming them into the dominant European image. Needless to say, this led to overwhelming social strife, racism and prejudice that continue unabated to this day.

Nevertheless, the State of Israel grew. Originally, it was a State of Israelis for Israelis. The claim made by the State to be the national homeland for all Jews worldwide was then made so as to solicit for itself a population of like-minded western, secular Jews who would lend their support financially and intellectually to build the fledgling state and reinforce its secular socialist structure. Yet, as time went on, the State was actually forced to become that which it only honored in name only, this being a potential haven for all Jews worldwide. As circumstances (?) dictated, the new national homeland for the Jews was to become just that, a place where Jews fleeing persecution could run to, to escape that which the Europeans fled from in Europe at the hands of the Nazis and those who succeeded them.

Today, Israel has come to be much more than what its founders had originally intended. In spite of the constant denials of its leaders, the modern State has come to appear on center stage in the global struggle for power and dominion. Indeed, the Biblical apocalyptic scenario seems to be becoming fulfilled right before our eyes, with the modern secular State of Israel dragging its heels, as Heaven drags it along to fulfill and accomplish its destiny.

Today, 63 years after its founding, the ruling elite of Israel are the same western secular leftists and socialists who established the State at first. These European-minded secularists still cling to their out-dated ways of forcing the present State into the European mold, a model that no longer works nor meets the needs of the everyday citizen.

Yet, change never comes easily. It is a glaringly clear fact the the modern State of Israel should scrap its present form of government for a system similar to that embraced by the founding fathers of these United States. But politics rears its ugly head and national jealousy and competitions abound. Nevertheless, Israel will one day have to break its cultural ties with its founding European model. It will be forced to establish a system more similar to the American one, abolishing socialism and replacing its secular, European foundational laws and principles with those more suitable and fit for the entire world-wide body of Jews instead of for the elite socialist European class. Only once Israel has truly become a Jewish State through and through will the world be able to secure peace in the Middle East and avoid the present danger of impending apocalypse.

In order to survive as a Jewish State, Israel will be forced to become the one thing its secular European founders rejected the most. Israel will be forced to embrace more and more of its Jewish origins, in culture, in law, in philosophy and in society. Of course, the European elite would sooner betray their country and see its demise rather than let it turn into an actual Jewish state. We already see this happening. But this just validates the point that these founders and those who follow in their footsteps represent only their own secular, socialist self interests of imposing European style socialism, instead of embracing their greater Jewish identity with all the ramifications that this means.

The future of Israel is certain to be one of change. The society is in such a state of flux that within one generation, maybe two, the present system will become unsustainable. The public will demand changes, forcing the government to change in order to survive. Of course, there may be elements in government that would sooner vote for the growing world solution of dissolving the State entirely, rather than embracing the State's turning to its authentic Jewish origins. Nevertheless, if the voices of the secular socialists were to win out, their betrayal of their Jewish roots would be no different today that what it was over sixty years ago.

From a spiritual point of view, we who believe in G-d and prophecy look towards the modern State as fulfilling a role in G-d's plan for humanity and for the eventual coming of the long-awaited Messiah. While there are secular and religious elements in the State working significantly against this inevitable outcome, their efforts while tiresome and embarrassing, will in the end bring significant harms to themselves and unfortunately to many others. But G-d has His plans and they will be fulfilled, in spite of the best made plans of men seeking to thwart Heaven.

Today, Israel has become a concept bigger that its government desires to imagine. Today Israel has become the focus of the fulfillment of prophecy. Millions of G-d fearing, good, righteous human beings from many countries, of all faiths and walks of life, know this to be true and support the Jewish Israeli people, in spite of their lack of support from their own government. Israel today has become far greater than the State itself can imagine, and the State does not like it. This has come about by the Hand of Heaven. Today the supporters of Israel are legion and the majority of them are not even Jewish. Indeed, the non-Jewish supporters of Israel outnumber Israel's Jewish supporters. This is one of many of G-d's wonders and blessings.

So, regardless of its insufferable government, its corrupt bureaucracy and infrastructure, the State of Israel survives in spite of itself. In spite of the State's betrayal of its own land and its own people, the nation of Israel survives. Yes, the nation survives in spite of the State's government, ruling elite and corrupt leadership. Try as they may to bring their own State down, G-d works miracles and makes the State survive almost miraculously against overwhelming odds from outside and inside.

So, here we are sixty-three years after the birth of the modern state. In spite of itself and its government's overwhelming corruption, stupidity and arrogance, it is still there. It is not as strong as it could be or should be, but it is still there. The State is surrounded by its enemies, those that are known and even many more who, on the surface, claim to be its friend. Yet, Jews around the world are awakening to the unfortunate but true fact, which is that those who hate the State of Israel do so because of their hatred of Jews in general. The hatred of one cannot be separated from the hatred of the other. Even amongst some so-called Orthodox Jews we see that their hatred of the State of Israel is only matched by their hatred of fellow Jews who are not members of their own cultist sect.

In the end, G-d will sort out all the problems. But in the mean time, it is wise, important and necessary that Jews around the world come to recognize who their true friends are and who their true enemies are. Friends and enemies alike are today not defined by nationality, but rather by political and philosophical affiliation. The international secular socialist elite who today drive the anti-Israeli forces are those who in the last century also led the forces that sought to exterminate both the Jewish people and the Jewish religion. Let us not forget that the Nazis were the National Socialists of Germany and Communist Russia under Stalin and beyond was called the U.S.S.R. (the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics).

Jews have many enemies in the world today. These enemies are recognized by their philosophies and their continuing ideas and ideals that contradict the very nature of what it means to be a Jew and what it means to have a Jewish state and homeland. The future upcoming war will not be one of state verses state, but rather, it will be a war of philosophies and which philosophy can deceive the most people into fighting for its cause. In this, there is much to fear. For as the 20th century has shown us the Socialist agendas stop at nothing to create divisions and start wars that lead to the deaths of millions. Just look at Hitler, Stalin and Mao as the examples.

This rotten influence of secular socialism will eventually be vomited out of the world body of Jewry, leaving the true Jews to face their true enemies. On that day the State of Israel will become the center of all Jewish matters world-wide. And nothing will then stop the enemies of freedom, justice and liberty from attempting to destroy Israel, the Jews and the Bible, which is the cradle and home from where the concepts of freedom and liberty first began. The forces of evil plan to destroy the messenger thus destroying the message. But, G-d's plan will not be so easily thwarted.

On that ominous day, we will all be thankful that there is a State of Israel, one that has become proud of its Jewish origins and its Jewish identity. Israel, on that day, will stand triumphant and proud, to be one nation, under G-d, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all. Today these are American words, tomorrow they will be the foundation and motto of a free and independent Jewish State of Israel. Long may she reign. May G-d bless her and save her from enemies from within and without.

Happy Birthday Israel. May your renewal come soon, so that your many exiled sons and daughters may look to you as a kindred body of fellow Jews who embrace the values of liberty, freedom and justice, even as the Word of G-d has instructed us.

May we all pray that the day will come quickly and soon that instead of Jews having to flee the tyranny of oppressive nations only to be absorbed by the oppressive tyranny of the modern secular, socialist State, Jews can instead chose to look to Israel as a place where finally and forever one can fully and truly live the life of a Jew as Judaism has originally meant it to be. Only when Israel finally decides to be truly Jewish Israel will it finally be able to take its place as being a respected nation amongst the nations of the world.
