

Words that I Saw in the Inner Recesses of My Mind

by Ariel Bar Tzadok, on the Seventh Day of Pesah, 2013

In the early morning hours, before the rising of the sun, in the stillness of the night, I lied back, closed my eyes and opened my mind, as is my way. As I pondered the meanings of many things, my mind began to wander, as it often does. Unafraid, and knowing how, I surrendered myself, my mind and my life, knowing that I would be again taken up and shown that which the moment needs for me to see. As I gazed upon what looked like eternity, seeking what it was that I was supposed to see, I saw the following in pictures, images and impressions upon my mind. These words then came to me to give form to that which my mind saw with the seeing inner eye. For whatever reasons, I feel that I am meant to share them with you.

Stop looking at the big picture!

It is not our job to complete it!

Start looking at

what is right in front of you, pay attention to what is,

not what should be or what will be.

Stay in the here and now,

and the here and now

will naturally allow you to flow to where you need to be,

when you need to be there.

We are all parts of the One.

Each of us is unique in our task.

We do what must be done, simply because that is what must be done.

When all is done,

all will be in peace and harmony.

Until then, we each do our duty.

Every thing in its place,

every thing

doing its assigned function,

every thing

fulfilling its unique destiny, this is the purpose of existence.

Ours is not to complete the whole,

ours is just to complete

our individual share.

Stop looking for God!

Start looking for your self.

When you find your self,

you will then see God

reflecting back at you,

through the image

that you perceive within!

When you see God

reflected within your self,

you will also see the reflection of all creation,

and where you fit

into the greater scheme of things.

When we know our selves,

we come to see God,

we see creation,

and we see where we are in creation.

These insights, imbue life with its purpose and meaning.

Only then will we know!

And with knowledge

comes the power to be!

God is Being in Action.

We are the Hands,

the very messengers of God,

whenever the Being of the universe acts through us.

And when is this?

Always!
