There is an ebb and flow to all things under Heaven. The laws of nature control more than the world around us, these same laws control everything inside us as well, including our human psychology. Astrology is not an art, but rather it is the vortex where psychology meets cosmology. Understand astrology properly and one will see the trends as they are presently unfolding. There is nothing new under the sun. The future is unfolding in mechanical synchrony with the past.

Anyone in sync with humanity's collective consciousness can detect the presence of a great disturbance. This disturbance is rumbling in the unconscious minds of peoples around the world. It is causing waves of discontent. Yet, this is a discontent without any one focal point. It is not like there is something wrong that needs to be fixed. Rather, it is more like everything is wrong and thus everything needs to be fixed. This disturbance makes the individuals feels overwhelmed and at the same time frightened and destructive. This is definitely a dangerous mixture.

It seems like the whole world is about to explode. More than this, it seems that fires of all kinds in the political, social and economic arenas keep popping up. Try as they do to put all these fires out, world leaders are having a real hard time at it. It won't be too long before another burst of flames erupt which will not be able to be controlled. When this fire erupts, then the entire world will burst into flames, starting with the inner minds of human beings.

Insanity is the first step to destruction. This was prophesied long ago. The first level of punishment that Heaven inflicts upon humanity is the loss of sanity. Well, actually, before this, Heaven first removes wisdom the from so-called "wise" leaving them empty shells, wise in name only. Then without actual leadership, the masses lose the ability to think and to reason. They become like sheep ready for the slaughter. We have seen this state now for some time.

It does not take much to topple the sensitive state of balance that holds everything so precariously in place. Try as we will, no human being or force on Earth has been given the power to topple that which Heaven has built or to build that which Heaven has toppled. When the time comes to remove the "kingpin" causing everything to come collapsing down, that act will be performed by the hand of an angel, and not by the hand of any human being.

Only God knows the time, only God knows the place, and only God knows the circumstances that He will chose to be "the ones." All we can do is the best we can, with what we have.

I have long told people that righteousness is the best preparation for hard times to come. Strength of character and strength of mind (not to mention strength of body) are far more valuable tools that any others in hard times.

Righteousness acts as a shield. The righteous are protected by Heaven. When “the moment” comes, the righteous may not have received prior warning, yet deep within them, that “still silent voice” speaks to them and tells them what to do next.

Only those who can hear that voice now will be able to hear it then. This is why I so strongly emphasize the learning of proper, connecting spiritual practices. Waste your time all you wish with the stuff that either makes you feel good or makes you think that you are important. Neither of these will get you through the “tight squeeze” when it comes.

Just remember this, what is to come, has already been. In the past came water, in the future, fire. This is the nature of things. All is ordained by Heaven.

Those in true sync with Heaven will be moved by Heaven's direction. Those who stubbornly stand still, proclaiming loudly that they are already in the right place will be shown up to either be right or wrong. Judging from past experience, in almost every case, the stubborn and the arrogant have been wiped out every time. Usually they boldly proclaim how God is on their side. Yet, somehow Heaven has another take on the situation. So, those of you so boldly and arrogantly assured of your religiosity may want to think twice, if you are able, about just how connected to Heaven you, as an individual, really are.

The name of the game here surprisingly is not survival. Heaven has already decided who will live and who will die. Granted, the list will be reviewed and renewed with the coming New Moon and New Year, so we have our opportunity to get things right, if we chose to do so properly.

Our job is not to worry about the future. Our job is to worry about today. Live rightly today and you will be blessed by Heaven to have more opportunities to do what's right tomorrow.

The cosmic forces around us are moving and interacting with Newtonian precision. What is meant to happen, will happen. All we can do is to be aware. The sleepers must awaken.

Watch the skies and you will see the great judgment moving closer each day. It is not here yet, but its arrival is inevitable.

As for matters on the ground, things will go from bad to worse. Don't they always? Yet, still we are here! So, focus not on doom and gloom! This is not in your hands! Look to Heaven! Watch the skies! Put your faith and your monies into wise preparations. Invest in yourselves and in your educations.

Don't forget all the “beans and bullets”, but invest in learning to hear the “still silent voice within.” This, more than anything else, is God's way of reaching us with His warnings. If we cannot hear, then we will not be able to get to safety at the right moment.

Silence now your mouth from speaking. Clear your mind of questions. Wisdom returns in the silence within. God is your guide. Learn to hear His Voice.

There is nothing more to add.
