Looking for Ancient Aliens to return?

They, in turn,
may be waiting for us.

They are, today,
waiting in the same place that they have been for a long time:
waiting for us,
on the other side of consciousness.

When we finally meet again face to face, we may very well be surprised as to what face we will find greeting us. Now, let us turn to some pertinent points that might help speed up our inevitable reunion.

What is the final frontier of science? What new revelations about the universe await our discovery? It appears that the path of scientific exploration is never-ending. Is our human potential is equally infinite? How can we human beings continue to march along the path further into the secrets of the external universe all the while that our inner universe remains mostly unexplored, and therefore, relatively unknown?

It is a real danger for the unprepared to be given tools that they do not know how to properly handle. It is a real danger for humanity to develop forms of science and technology if we lack the maturity, and wisdom to know how to properly use them.

Scientific exploration is moving forward with rapid speed. It is not only wise, but necessary for internal explorations into the powers of the human mind, and expanding consciousness, to move along with equal, if not greater rapidity. The exploration of inner space, and the development of the individual human psyche must come first!

No structure can stand strong unless first built upon a stable foundation. Foundations are everything! The human mind, and its unexplored powers and potential, are the foundations upon which all future human development will evolve.

Since ancient times almost every culture and civilization has given birth to their own unique path towards inner discovery. These are the meditative teachings found among many of the world's religions. These were not geared to explain the mechanics of the outside universe, but rather to enable individuals to explore their own internal universes, and to extract from them revelations, and insights that will help them better understand the outside world.

Contact with Heaven (the gods, angels, or whoever) was not through a spaceship of metal, but rather through a Merkava (chariot) of projected mind, and astral travel.

In modern times, scientific exploration has become so prominent that the explorations of the inner realms of the human psyche have, for the most part, fallen by the wayside. This is a dangerous, and backwards psychological (psychic) progression. Exploration of the individual psyche is today even more vital in light of our new scientific discoveries, and abilities.

Modern science has begun to explain our universe, and to thereby replace so many of the ancient myths embraced for centuries that so many held so dear. Yet, instead of replacing these ancient myths with new insights from the inner Self, science has left a gaping chasm, an emptiness, and a hole, that has left many feeling bereft, lost, and without a sense of purpose, and meaning.

Science cannot and will not ever answer the questions, “who am I,” and “why am I here.” But these questions need to be answered. These answers can never come from the outside. They can only come from within. Thus, it is vital that inner exploration of the mind, and soul be embraced anew.

Regardless of the different meditative paths along the journey towards self-discovery, in the end, all lead to the same Source, this being the true secret of our inner, united humanity.

We believe that we are all equally “created in the Image of God,” and thus we are all equally “God's children.” Yet, what does this really mean? Who, or what is this God, and what does it mean to be It's children?

These are questions whose answers can only be found in inner space. This exploration must proceed with greater rapidity before our scientific explorations run so far ahead, that we become unstable due to our lack of solid psychic foundations.

Remember this, we can only build a world as good as we are ourselves. Better the individual, and we better all that the individuals create.

Explore! Discover your personal path of internal exploration. Meditate! Discover your inner potential, and your true internal reality. Become the ideal one that is waiting inside you to be released. Change your self, and change the world!

When our internal development matures, our external sciences will reflect our newly found inner realities. With this state of harmony, we will proceed into such new and amazing discoveries that our present state will be looked back at being just humanity's childhood.

There is an entire universe out there waiting for us to first find our inner potentials. When we, as a race, and as a planet, manage this maturing accomplishment, we will be amazed by what (or whom) will be waiting to welcome us. Our present course of human history is being directed (by “higher powers that be”) towards this inevitable goal.

The development of mind/soul technology is the final frontier. This is what the meditative traditions throughout history have been pointing to. Our spiritual, psychic adulthood awaits, along with all the wonders, and privileges that this will bring.

External reality transforms based upon internal insights. Expand the mind, and we will expand all that the mind can see. When the eye of the mind expands, the eye of the body will finally see that which is invisible, and hidden to us today.

Let's keep the fire burning!
